

Your biblical foundation for giving

The most life-changing giving strategy is one based on biblical principles. It can help you give with kingdom impact, leave a meaningful legacy, cultivate unity in your family, and maximize what you have to give. In the following exercises you will connect and reflect on what God wants for your generosity journey.

Quiet reflections

Read NCF's "10 principles of biblical generosity" devotional before diving into the questions below. (Download available at ncfgiving.com/devotional)

Which principles do you feel eager and comfortable to pursue?

Which principles feel more challenging or unfamiliar?

Perspectives on giving

As you reflect on your responses in the previous exercise, record some times when you have experienced these biblical principles at work in your life.

What are some of the barriers in your life that might be hindering you from believing or practicing the principles that are more challenging?

Guiding Scripture

What are some of your favorite Bible verses and passages that inspire you to give?

If you need inspiration, start with the Scripture references for each principle.

Choose up to three Scriptures that will guide your future giving.
